1 Top of the range

Due to building constraints, a large skylight was the only way to ensure that this room received good natural light. The cooktop has been installed in the island with the rangehood above it, freeing up the lengthy countertop opposite for food preparation and a generous bank of overhead cupboards. A powerful rangehood which would not dominate was key to the design.

2 In the zone

The working part of the kitchen is divided into three designated zones comprising the sink unit, the cooktop area opposite and the pièce de résistance – the appliance zone. This includes a column of Miele appliances: a tray drawer, steam oven, coffee machine, oven and, finally, a warming drawer underneath. The only separate appliance is an integrated drinks fridge at the end of the bench units, positioned for easy access from the outdoor entertaining area.

3 Fabulous flooring

Gleaming, large-format porcelain tiles provide the perfect foil to the more colourful aspects of this kitchen; with minimal grouting, the tiles are also easy to keep clean and impervious to common stains and spills.

4 Seeing red

Such a large area called for strong colours to visually lift the white units and neutral benchtops and floor tiles. The scarlet Altone dining table works as a stand-out tonal counterpoint to the splashback in soft aqua.
